

STUDY RELIGIOUS STUDIES AT CENTRAL EUROPEAN UNIVERSITY

Vienna, Austria

Advanced Certificate in Religious Studies (ACRS)

MA and PhD students completing the Religious Studies program at CEU are awarded, alongside their departmental degree, an internationally recognized specialization certificate, the ACRS, registered with the New York State Education Department (NYSED). Many graduates pursue high-profile academic, public and private sector careers.

MA Students

The study of religion is an interdisciplinary subject field of its own. Of its distinctive paradigmatic elements, some derive from historical and philological studies and others from anthropology and sociology: all need to be fully taken on board. At CEU, Religious Studies focus on the three monotheistic religions, with other religions covered in more general comparative approaches.

Multidisciplinary Approaches

The following academic programs at CEU offer Religious Studies alongside their degree tracks: Cultural Heritage Studies, Gender Studies, History, International Relations, Medieval Studies, Philosophy, Political Science, Nationalism Studies, Public Policy, and Sociology and Social Anthropology.

Scholarships Available

The Center for Religious Studies (CRS) has a number of partial scholarships available to incoming ACRS students accepted into participating degree-giving programs at CEU. To be eligible for consideration, students must signal on their application form their intention to join on admission. Check out our website or write us for details.

PhD Students

CEU doctoral candidates participate in the CRS as junior members or as ACRS students. They join an interdisciplinary circle of ambitious and innovative peers in attending PhD Masterclasses, carrying out research with specialized travel grant funds, hosting our annual international PhD conference, and co-teaching religion-related courses at CEU.
